“±i Privileges

Is your Tiki open to the public, or is it closed (even for viewing) to a select circle? A full array of options is available.

Most Tiki installations start with three basic user types:

- admin - Each site begins with one "god-level" administrator, who can create/shape/delete pretty much anything. (There should only be one top level admin by default, don't create others unless you really really trust them to know what they are doing.)
- registered - Registered users are one of the two user groups created by default. Administer the permissions of this group for each feature of your Tiki to reflect the permissions settings that you intend to be universal.
- anonymous - Anonymous users can be viewed as either:
 - users who haven't logged in yet - in which case they get minimal permissions (view and login/register)
 - users who prefer to remain anonymous - in which case you award the group your minimal permissions across all features you want to allow anonymous participation in.
 - lazy/stupid users - Admins who are looking to maximize the contributions (grow content) are likely to facilitate users who are either too lazy or clumsy to manage logging in (probably not a small percentage of the traffic). In this case, be aware you are creating a "wild west" and should maintain surveillance over the changes to your site

Themes can be applied globally, to specific categories of pages (which can correspond to user groups.) With the appropriate settings, users can pick their own theme.

It is possible to enable the editing of the .tpl files within Tiki, but most will use a web design program via FTP to make changes to a template. See Customizing Themes.
